Anubis Collection
 by Valpra by Rossi
 Valpra Design

One of the latest products to be developed by Valpra is the electronic Anubis tap, part of a severe yet soft collection that is highly functional and practical, both indispensable requirements for the contract sector. Anubis, by Talocci Design, uses an internationally patented mechanical flow regulation system, which makes it possible to regulate the water flow very easily between 2 and 10.3 litres per minute, in order to cater for specific requirements. The mechanism also enables the operator/installer to make the necessary flow adjustments, without having to close off the system, leading to effective savings in operating times. The fluid design is a perfect match for the modern, linear shapes of the accessories in the collection, adding a strong but sober personality by means of just a small number of features. The vertical mark that characterises the series evokes the male symbol and is repeated in every element, defining the various functions on an individual basis. Anubis collection is comprised of a series of complements such as the electronic tap for external urinal and the wide range of accessories such as the liquid soap dispenser, the paper towel dispenser, the waste paper bin, the toilet paper dispenser – available in both a fitted version and an external version – the clothes hooks and the classic toilet brush, all in stainless steel.
